LANDMARK PAINTING EXHIBITION CARAVAGGIO AND HIS FOLLOWERS TO BE EXHIBITED AT CLEVELAND

The first major exhibition in America devoted to the work and influence of the 17th century Italian master painter, Michelangelo Merisi da Caravaggio, opens October 30 at The Cleveland Museum of Art and will be on view to the public through January 2, 1972. The exhibition was organized by Professor Richard Spear of Oberlin College who also prepared the exhibition's fully illustrated catalog.

Caravaggio was born in 1573 just north of Milan. He moved to Rome in about 1590 where, after an initial period of hardship, his brilliantly unorthodox paintings began to attract influential patrons. However, his violent personal life and his revolutionary interpretation of sacred subjects earned him many enemies who eventually succeeded in having him banished. He wandered to Naples and then to Malta where he was made a Knight of Malta and shortly thereafter cast into prison. He escaped from the island and made his way back to the Italian mainland. Much of his tempestuous life is still obscure -- except for police records which followed him from city to city. In the end, it was his ungovernable temper and furious despair that led to his squalid death in a beachside hovel at the age of 37.

A total of eighty-one paintings will be exhibited, many of them from sources outside the United States; these include loans from the national galleries of Italy, Spain, France, the Netherlands, Sweden, Scotland, Mexico and Canada, as well as paintings from distinguished private collectors, including Her Majesty the Queen of England.

The exhibition is intended to be a critical re-appraisal of the master and a definition of those artists who can be said to be directly influenced by his work. The scholarly importance of the exhibition can hardly be overestimated; specialists and art historians from London, Paris and Rome are among a panel of distinguished visitors who will participate in a symposium at the Museum to examine and clarify the problems surrounding Caravaggio and his followers.
